your cue for quality & excellence

I have a passion for perfection that goes back to the time I spent working in the automotive industry. Achieving excellence and striving for zero defects is possible without a significant investment. It is all about designing a robust and simple and effective processes.

I became an internal and external EFQM assessor since 2000 and have performed since than many assessments in various organizations and countries.

Over the course of my career, I have gained hands-on experience in several domains along the value chain and in many business sectors. I have found that customer experience is the best gauge for success and technology is the key to achieve it. There is always a win-win approach to be found, and I enjoy working with people as they try to perfect it. This, to me, is at the core of responsible and sustainable entrepreneurship.
